

REAL WEDDINGS

Centerpieces were comprised of rectangular vases filled with a single type of flower, as well as arrangements of bright-green wheat grass. "The colors of the flowers were inspired by the colors Monet used in his murals," says the bride.

As the newlyweds entered the reception tent, guests applauded in sign language by waving their hands.

During the reception, Erin and Matthew found private places where they could be alone together. "We spent weeks looking at different wedding venues in the area," says Erin. "But then we realized that my parents' country club was exactly what we were looking for."

Erin and Matthew danced for the first time as newlyweds to "It Had To Be You," by Harry Connick, Jr. Afterward, guests joined the couple on the dance floor as Mike Dodson, of MDM Entertainment (mdm-entertainment.com), played a mix of classic dance tunes.

Cupcakes from Three Tarts Bakery & Cafe (threetartsbakery.com) were served instead of traditional wedding cake. The cupcakes were frosted with chocolate ganache, and each was topped with a buttercream flower inspired by those used in the bride's bouquet.
